

Leaving a Legacy ...

Last fall Emery and Geraldine (or Gerry) Cawsey requested to meet with the Spirit of the North Healthcare Foundation for information about leaving a legacy through their estate as well as establishing a bursary for nursing education. The connection was made. It seemed a natural fit as they had great respect for the health professionals who educate themselves to take care of others, nurses in particular as Gerry had been a nurse here herself for many years. Their lives had been touched by healthcare professionals over the years and their passion was to assist those who choose this career path.

For those of you who don't know Emery and Gerry, they are long time Prince George people, who have over the years invested time and commitment to their community in many ways. They would say that they are just an average couple, but we think they are so much more. They enjoy involvement in the community through their volunteerism. Even today they're volunteering at the Cancer Centre for the North each week. They are truly giving individuals — giving of their time and giving from their hearts to causes they believe in.

"As long time residents of Prince George," says Emery, "we take pride in our city, including our hospital community and it's regional services. We come from a family of nurses -- past, present and future. We have benefitted from the education, skills and experience of specialized nursing. For these reasons we obviously have a bias towards the nursing profession. Consequently we have chosen to establish an ongoing nursing education bursary through the Spirit of the North Healthcare Foundation and have also included the Foundation and nursing education in our estate planning."

The Cawseys believe in the Spirit of the North and our endeavor to improve healthcare for all patients in the North. They strongly believe that anybody at any age can give back to their community.

Thank you!
